LIST OF THOSE WHO SUPPORT THE "MIXED" TICKET OF CANDIDATES.

The friends of the Blakeman or "mixed" ticket of candidates for the nominating committee of the Union leafue Club have issued their circular, which presents the issues of the contest as they are understood by that side, and the list of the supporters of the facas far as they could be obtained. The Blakeman party insists that politics have nothing to do with the on. The circular contains 144 names, against 213 given in the appeal issued by the other side a week The election takes place to-morrow night.

characterized the conduct of the club's affairs since the election of the "members' ticket" in 1890. The next annual report will justify the confidence which the club has reposed in its management.

We deprecate the attempt which has been made to give a political character to the present curvass—first, because it has no basis in fact, the political views of the nominees precluding the possibility of such an issue; and second, because no good end can be conserved by inviting controversies in the club to disturb the existing harmonious conditions.

You are carnestly "requested to promote by your presence and vote at the meeting of the club on December 10 next, the election of the above-named members a nominating committee, theirs being the first seven names on the ticket.

The ticket should be voted by checking the names of the candidates for whom the ballot is cass, and not be crossing out the names of those for whom it is not intended to vote. Respectfully.

MORE MONEY LOST FOR THE PUBLIC.

ANOTHER PHILANTHROPIC BEQUEST DECLARED VOID BY THE COURTS.

Justice Lawrence, in the Supreme Court, yesterday handed down an opinion setting aside the clause of the will of Jose Sevilla, which had for its purpose the establishment of the Sevilla Home for Girls in this city. Mr. Sevilla was a Peruvian and lived in this city for a short time. He died on December 9, 1886. In his will there was a clause providing that bonds, the nominal value of which was $500,000, should be used to establish this home. He also provided that these bonds should be held for two years after his death, and the interest allowed to accumulate for that time before they were to be used for the purpose mentioned in the The market value of these bonds was $375, 600. The will mentioned a number of prominent New-York men, and from this list the Surrogate of this county was to appoint a committee of seven. The Surrogate appointed August Belmont, William Henry Osborn, Jose M. Munoz, William R. Grace, Henry Budge, John A. Stewart and Roswell G. Roiston. board was incorporated in 1980. The executors began a suit for a construction of this clause, and the suit was tried nearly two years ago. Judge Lawrence says that he has been holding back his decision in consequence of the Tilden case, which had some of the same questions involved, and he wanted to know what the decision of the Court of Appeals would be. He sets the clause aside, on the ground that there were no persons at the time of the death of Mr. Sevilla who could take the bequest.

IRISH FRIENDS ENTERTAIN THE EARL

WHO SPORE. Charles Stewart Parnell, holding friendly converse with Farl Spencer at a dinner of the National Liberal Club in London, a couple of years ago, the same Earl, who as Viceroy of Ireland a few years before directed and enforced the most drastic measures against the people of that country, was scarcely more striking an example of the union of powerful forces for the accomplishment of Home Rule than the scene in Delmonico's last evening, when 150 or more representative Irishmen of New-York held friendly converse with the Earl of Aberdeen and his amiable wife, the Countess of Aberdeen. Like Lord Spencer, and the Duke of Connaught, brother of the Lord Aberdeen was also Viceroy of Ireland, and Prince of Wales, with the Duchess of Connaught. among the few great Liberal peers of means and of influence who remained faithful to Mr. Gladstone member for Midlothian promised to restore to Ireland her Parliament, which, by the act of union in 1800, had been destroyed. The Countess of Aberdee has take nan interest in the development of Irish industries from the time when she presided at the Viceregal court in Dublin Castle, and, with husband, has been several weeks in this country to promote the work for making an exhibition of many Irish industries at the World's Fair. The dinner was organized by members of the Irish National Federation of America, to show their appreciation of the efforts of Lord Aberdeen and his wife, in private as well as in public life, to destroy the prejudice that was ever on the increase in England against the demands of Ireland until Mr. Gladstone championed Home Rule, and to draw together in bonds of goodwill and peace the Celtic and the Anglo-Saxon race. Dr. Thomas Addis Emmet, a name full of patriotic sociations for Irishmen, presided, having on his right the guest of the evening and on his left Dr. Joseph Francis Fox, Member of Parliament for the Tullamore Division of Kings County, who came to America to organize the Irish National Federation. For the complete success of the dinner much credit is due to Joseph P. Ryan, and also to Patrick Gleason, both of whom worked hard. Mr. Ryan and Mr. Gleason were each for many years president of the Municipal Council of the Irish National League. The guests each wore a badge of Gerden plaid, typical of the colors of the Clan Gordon, of which the Earl of Aberdeen in his native Scotland is the recognized head. On it were the thistle and shamrock twined. Delegations of Irishmen were present from other cities, among them being Fathers Walsh and Briscoe, from Providence; John Fahy and Patrick Cox. from Rochester; and Hugh McCaffrey, M. J. Ryan, Robert M. McWade and J. McMenamin, from Philadelphia; and from this city there were among the guests: Eugene Kelly, Richard M. Wakers, Andrew Carnegle. John D. Crimmins, Colonel William L. Brown, John H. Spellman, Hugh King, E. D. Farrell, James S. Coleman, Judge Bookstaver, Edward J. McGean, Michael Giblin, Commissioner Edward Sheeliy, E. J. Curry, president of the Home Rule Club; J. M. Wall, Thomas Willis, Peter McDonnell, the Rev. Dr. Gotthell, James P. Silo, Dr. C. J. MacGuire, James A. O'Gorman, Judge Morgan J. O'Brien, William J. Fanning, president of the St. Patrick's (); Francis Higgins, J. W. O'Brien, the Rev Dr. Charles E. McDonnell and C. M. O'Keefe; John Quinn, Michael Fennelly, Dr. W. B. Wallace, James T. Mulhern, ex-Governor Lounsbury, of Connecticut; Dr. S. J. O'Nelli, Dr. John A. McCreery, Police Captai McCullagh, Father Reilly, of Brooklyn; De Lancey Nicoll, Colonel John McAnerney, and the Rev. Patrick Hennessy, Jersey City.

The Countess of Aberdeen, surrounded by a group of women friends, was in the orchestra when th speeches began and followed with the liveliest interest the warm words of reference to Mr. Gladstone, to the Earl of Aberdeen and the many other friends of Ire land in public life to pledge their political fortunes in support of the cause of Home Rule. Among the fetters of regret from those who could not be present was one from Mr. Depew, whose sentiments on the flome Rule question everybody knows, and one from Bishop Potter, in the course of which he said: "I should have been glad to bear witness to my convic tion that government of the people by the people for the people will be, in the long run, the best thing for Ireland, as it has been the best thing for the Unite States. To maintain a lofty standard of honor and virtue in the administration of such a government will, I am sure, be as necessary for Ireland, if ever it be permitted to rule itself, as it is for America, and it is because Lord Aberdeen incarnates in his own person such a standard that I think you and your associates do well to honor him."

Dr. Thomas Addis Emmet presided and made the opening speech. He was followed by Judge Joseph F. Daly, who read an address to Lord Aberdeen, in the course of which he said:

No one knows better than your Lordship the history of the struggles of the Irish people. For many years you have been an actual witness of their sacrifices for principle, and when at length clearer light to dawn upon the minds of the Imperial law givers as to the proper treatment of the Irish question this vexed problem of centuries-and you were callby the most distinguished statesman of modern times, Mr. Gladstone, to direct the affairs of Ireland as Lord Lieutenant, you performed your duties with such fair ness as to call forth the unanimous plaudits of the Irish people, and to carry with you upon your fetirement their ardent affection: facts the more notable, be cause happening for the first time within the century in the history of the English Vice-Royalty in Ireland." (Loud applause.)

Lord Aberdeen in responding was witty and elo quent, and his speech was interrupted frequently with applause. "One of the most distinguishing traits of scotchmen," said he, "is modesty. (Laughter.) A Scotchmen," said he, "is modesty. (Laughter.) A Scotch writer said to me once: 'Mon, yer tongue is nae the tongue oo a Scotchman.' (Laughter.) I have not the eloquence of an Irishman, but I suppose I could mend that deficiency easily by being brief. (Renewed laughter.) Canning listened once to a sermon by the Bishop of London. 'How did you like my sermon' said the Bishop. 'It had one merit,' said Canning. 'It was afraid it might be tedious. Mr. Canning.' 'Oh, yes,' said Mr. Canning. 'your Lordship was tedious.' (Continued laughter.)

Lord Aberdeen, continuing, asked the Irishmen of America to be patient a little longer, to extend as they had in the past financial aid to the struggling people of Iteland in the gress battle which was impending at the polks, and the next general election would see Mr. Gladstone back in power with a majority sufficient to cenable him to pass a satisfactory measure of Home Rule for Ireland.

These were some of the other speakers: Major John Byrnes, who responded to the toast "America the Friend of Home Rule?" "Ireland.—Self-Governed."

Dr. W. B. Wallace: "The National Federation of Ireland," Dr. J. F. Fox, M. P.; "The American Press, the Champion of Human Liberty," E. F. Shepard.

He never before had shaken hands with me, as he is not in the habit of greeting clerks cordially. But I grasped his hand, of course, when it was held out to me, and he at once pulled me between afraid. As soon as he took hold of my hand his grip tightened, and he continued to walk backward toward his private office, pulling me with him. He was much excited, and apparently frightened. I endeavored to release my hand from the grasp of Mr. Sage. but he held it so tightly that I could not get away. Mr. Sage held me between himself and the bomb-thrower, but whether it was through fear or excitement I do not know. As my back was toward th was directly in front of Mr. Sage, I received the force of the explosion in my back and side, while Mr. sage escaped with a few scratches on his face. soon as the bomb went off the banker rushed through the private door of his office. I followed. We both tried to open a window there, but as escape that way seemed dangerous, we turned around and rushed out into the hallway through a doorway leading from the private office.'

Dr. Shea, the hospital physician who is attending Laidlaw, heard him make the foregoing statement. The doctor says his patient's injuries are on his back and side, as if he had stood with his back toward the bomb-thrower when the explosion took place. Laidlaw is improving rapidly, he says, and will be able to be out the statement made by Mr. Laldlaw. Mr. Sage was not able to be seen. When first brought home, howextreme minuteness the circumstances of the affair.

Mrs. Sage talked freely with the reporter and gave fully her husband's statement, which differs materially from Mr. Laidlaw's version. Mrs. Sage said that Mr. Sage declared that Laidlaw and the stranger were sented together on the bench when he emerged from his taner office in response to the stranger's de mand for an interview. Mr. Laidlaw deserved to re ceive attention first, as he had been waiting longer but the bomb thrower pressed his business. After Mr. Sage had returned the typewritten demand for $1,200,000, he took two steps backward. Meanwhile Mr. Laidlaw arose and extended his hand containing a paper relating to the mission on which he had come. Then came the explosion. Mr. Sage is sure, his wife save, that he did not take the seven receive his paper. His attention was so en grossed by the stranger on the one hand, and on the other with Mr. James, who was within the office waiting to receive attention, that he was scarcely of Mr. Laidlaw's presence. He does not think Laidlaw was between himself and the stranger, he says After the explosion he remembers distinctly lying beside Mr. Laidiaw, who asked what he should do. Mr. Sage said, "Let's get up," and arose, and offered his hand to Laidlaw.

There was little surprise in Wall Street yesterday when Russell Sage falled to come to his office. Colonel J. J. Slorum, the head clerk, said that business now moving smoothly at the temporary quarters in the rooms of the Manhattan Rallway Company. saw Mr. Sage this morning," he said, "and he looked decidedly better. He went out driving this afternoon. If it had not been for his doctor's injunctions Mr. Sage would have come downtown to-day. I think it is strongly probable that he will be here to-morrow."

A check for $100,000, drawn by C. A. Harned & Co. to the order of Mr. Sage, was found in the rubbish of the office, which is still being searched for possible valuable documents. It was torn and soiled, but was taken to bank and cashed, thereby releasing the bond of indemnity which Colonel Slocum had made to secure the issue of a duplicate check. Another check for small amount, drawn by Harriman & Co., was also found. This leaves only two other checks missing.
All the books of Mr. Sage have been recovered from Chief Inspector Byrnes said yesterday that the name of the man who threw the dynamite bomb in Russell Sage's office was still unknown. Detectives had followed up eight different alleged identifications of the head at the Morgue, he said, and in each case the person to whom the head was supposed to have belonged was found alive. The Inspector has a piece of red, white and blue ribbon, which was found in the wrecked office at No. 71 Broadway. It was found sticking to the broken ceiling directly over the place where the bomb-thrower is supposed to have stood. According to the story told by Capitain Harry Horne, who identified the head at the Morgue, the bomb-thrower had exhibited a peculiar badge attached to such a ribbon. The bomb-thrower told Horne that the hadge was used to designate an officer in a secret organization, to which W. D. Southworth was said to belong. It is a curious coincidence that the police found a badge like the one described by Horne in the possession of southworth, but without the ribbon. Inspector Byrnes said he had no positive evidence that Southworth was connected with the bomb-none of them could identify the head. Two men who examined it carefully said they could not who examined it carefully said they could not recognize it. But they said that they had seen "Professor" Denton yesterday morning in a liquor store, at Moore and Leonard sts., in Brooklyn. About half-past 4 o'clock a man from Police Hend-narters with a young man, took the head out of the jar and examined the teeth and back of the bend and the hair minutely. The examination seemed to confirm an identification which the young man had evidently made before Inspector Lyrnes. They refused to say anything whatever about it.

A man, who said he was a brother of "Professor" Denton went from his home, at Glendale, L. I., but after looking at the head said that it was not that of his relative.

after looking at the head said that it was not that of his relative.

The janitor of the Bowery Branch of the Young Men's Christian Association called and said that South-worth had occasionally called at the building with a stranger, who, he hought, might possibly have been the dynamite-thrower. But he could nor recognize him though he looked at the face long and carefully.

Bessie Reeves, of No. 111 Clinton Place, said the head looked like that of a man who engaged rooms at her mother's house about two years ago. She said the man had often spoken about Jay Gould and the Van-derbitts. derbits.

The condition of the wounded men at the hospitals is improving daily. At the Chambers Street Hospital Frank Robertson and C. W. Osborne were both doing well. Dis Douglas, Fitch and Field spent some hours vesterday afternoon in the insane pavilion at Bellevus Hospital examining W. D. Southworth, who was said to have been an associate of the dynamite thrower, but they were unable to reach a definite conclusion. The examination will be continued to-day.

OBITUARY.

WOLCOTI BALESTIER. News has been received here of the death on Sun day night of Wolcott Baiestier, the Citer, in Dresden Germany. The fatal illness was typhold fever. Mr. Balestier was only thirty years old, lacking a week when he died, but he had already achieved considerable fame as an author. He was born in Rochester, mother's side was E. Peshine Smith, a jurist and writer. Wolcott Balestier passed his younger days in various parts of the country, being a student at Cornell Rochester, but he soon began to contribute sketches and short stories to periodicals. His first story of importance was "A Patent Philter," which appeared serially in The Tribune in 1884. In the same year he published "A Fair Device," a novel, and "A Life of James G. Blaine." His novel "A Victorious Dein this city, and merged it in a new periodical, "Time." About two years ago he went to London, formed the publish ing house of Heineman & Balestier, Limited, which really represented a firm in this city. The London house published a series of books in Leipzig, Germany, known as the English Library, which is a rival to the Tauchnitz editions of English books.

Mr. Balestier is joint author with Rudyard Kipling of the novel "Naulahka," which was begun in "The Century " last month. The scene is laid partly in the Western part of the United States, and partly in India, Mr. Bales-tier wrote that portion of the novel dealing with this country, while Mr. Kipling wrote the rest. Each seems to have had an equal share in the work. The two young writers met about two years ago. Mr. Balestier had a novelette, "A Common Story," in "The Century" last August, and in February magazine will publish his "Reffey," a Western story. has also a novel by the same author, to be printe later.

Mr. Balestier was unmarried, and was just preparing to rent a house in London where he was going to live with his mother. He was an ambitious, careful writer, and Richard Watson Gilder and his associates on "The Century" had the highest regard for him personally, and, judging from the progress he was making in his work, believed that his future as a writer was unusually full of promise.

ATHLETIC MEETING AT HARVARD.

Cambeldge, Mass., Dec. 8 (Special).—The most important athletic meeting held at Harvard for many months took place this evening in Sever Hall, when Professor Ames, of the same committee, and others undertook to explain to the college the constitution, powers and object of the work white he committee. Among aprominent graduates of the athletic committee. Among aprominent graduates of the athletic committee, and others undertook to explain to the college the constitution, powers and object of the work which it accomplished, of its purposes and of the work which it accomplished, of its purposes and of the work which it accomplished, of its purposes and of the work which it accomplished, of the special professor Ames, of the state of the work which it accomplished, of its purposes and of the work which it accomplished, of the professor of development up to the full of 1888, when the committee was organized in a different professor which w Hooper, Professor Ames, G. Walcott George Minical and others. Professor White began by giving a history of the athletic committee, which was organized in a different form in 1882, and then traced it through its different stages of development up to the fail of 1888, when the committee was organized as it is composed now. Then he told of the work which it accomplished, of its purposes and of the methods which it had shown in dealing with certain problems of athletics. Especially did Professor White devote his attention to an exposition of what the New-England rule really meant. It was not passed to exclude New-York as a field of contest, but rather to limit the range of contests. He gave a short sketch of secret negotiation in the last two years with Yale for a dual league, which all came to naught, for Harvard would not play "which all came to naught, for Harvard would not play the annual game of football in New-York for sufficient reasons." Then Professor Ames answered some general questions regarding the committee's policy, and after a little more informal talk the meeting adjourned.

SWEDIEH REPUBLICANS ORGANIZE

The political activity among the Swedes of this city is on the increase. On Monday night they had a Oscar Weyrauch, the bookbinder who wrote a threat-ening note to Conrad Harris, a retired wine merchant, well attended meeting at No. 52 Lexington-aves, where the Swedish Fassett and Vrooman Club, which did good work in the last campaign, was reorganized and together with the Swedish Republican (Ilnb of the XVIIIth Assembly District formed the Swedish Republican Central Club, consisting of several hundred men The following were elected officers: President, Hakan Johansen; first vice-president, Edward Sundell; second vice-president, C. P. Johansen; storetary, Hugo Inl-strom; corresponding secretary, John Simpson; tras-urer, S. A. Smith.

A new farce by Bisson and Carrie is called in its French original "The Monsetrap." The version of B that was played for the first time last night at Herr-mann's Theatre is named "The Junior Partner," and it is evidently a translation rather than an adaptation The cituations, after one dull act has drugged itself away, are comical and the dialogue is amusing, though it sometimes made the sensitive New-York first-night theatregoer catch his breath. There are only eight parts in the farce, and the most of them are in compe-tent hands.
